

Quantitative Analysis: Involves the measurement of quantities of substances produced in reactions rather than simply noting the nature of reactions. Quantitative Analysis seeks to establish the amount of a given element or compound in a sample. This requirement may be satisfied by the completion of other courses containing specific topics related to the quantitative analysis of chemical compounds.